Production Notes

Director's Notes

Each year ArtBarn Theatre produces a play that is not well known to local theatre audiences. Epic Proportions is our 2005 choice. Set in the 1930s, this epic comedy is the story of two brothers who go to the Arizona desert to be extras in the huge Biblical epic, Exeunt Omnes. Before you know it, one is directing the movie, and the other is starring in it. To complicate matters further they both fall in love with the assistant director in charge of the extras. Along the way there are gladiator battles, the Ten Plagues and the Great Pyramids with a cast of thousands being portrayed by a handful of actors as well as you—the audience! As main character Louise Goldman remarks, “Who knew?” Interestingly, this ArtBarn production is an opportunity to enjoy the story before it is made into a movie tentatively planned for production in 2006.

All of us remember a time in our lives that a group we are in is divided into teams by counting off by “4’s”. This experience is referred to in the play. By chance each person becomes part of a group and everything is equal, right? Wrong. There always emerges one team that struggles more, one team that doesn’t seem to have as much talent, and one team that ends up doing all the dirty work. This production celebrates those teams and all the underdogs of the world. How many times have we heard the words, “Those who are first will be last and those who are last will be first” as an incentive to keep our chins up and our eye on the prize? May the lesson you learn from this simple comedy help you stay focused as you head home tonight knowing that each of you is an unique individual with unique ideas, unique talents, and unique hopes and dreams. May the blessings you achieve in your lives—no matter what number you are—be of “epic proportions”.

Enjoy the show!
